MOVES
MANIPULATE SOMETHING OR SOMEONE	BREAK SOMEONE OR SOMETHING	TAKE STOCK
When The Detective manipulates a reluctant person with promises or threats, say what he's trying to manipulate them to do, and give them a good reason. Then, roll 2d6 plus the Stat of the Facet he's trying to manipulate them with. On a 10+, they'll do it with little protest unless his reason proves false. On a 7-9, the Facet whose Stat he used will pick one: - They want concrete, upfront proof of The Detective's words. - They want an additional favor done for them first. - They make a counter-offer or challenge.	When The Detective attacks a threat in order to break it, roll 2d6 plus the Stat of the Facet he's trying to attack with. On a hit, both sides first exchange Stress as established. On a 7-9, The Detective then chooses one from this list. On a 10+, The Detective chooses two. - Gain something useful from the threat. - Suffer less Stress (-1 Stress to The Detective) - Inflict terrible Stress (+1 Stress to them) - Force the threat to change its behavior, trajectory, or target. - Take definite control of it for now.	When The Detective takes stock in a tense moment, roll 2d6 plus the Stat of the Facet The Detective's trying to take stock with. On a 10+, The Detective holds 3. On a 7-9, The Detective holds 2. Over the course of the scene, he can spend his Hold, one-for-one, to ask questions of the Facet whose stat he used. The Facet will answer truthfully. The Detective can ask any from this list no matter which Facet he asks: - What here is the biggest threat to _____? - What's a vulnerability I can take advantage of? If asking Intellect, he may also ask from this list: - What do I already know about this? - What's the ultimate goal here? - What is about to happen? If asking Psyche, he may also ask from this list: - How am I expected to act right now? - How can I get someone here to _____? - What's the hidden power dynamic at play here? If asking Fysique, he may also ask from this list: - How can I take back control? - Where is my true enemy, really? - What here is in the greatest danger? If asking Motorics, he may also ask from this list: - What here can I use to _____? - What appears out of place? - What's my best way in or out?
MAKE A DEDUCTION	ACT UNDER PRESSURE
When The Detective decides two pieces of Evidence or Deductions are connected, name them, and ask the Facets why they're connected. Each Facet with an idea states their version of events. Whichever one The Detective picks is definitively true. The Facet whose version was picked adds 1 to their Stat, and tells another Facet to subtract 1 from their stat.	When The Detective acts under pressure, roll 2d6 plus the Stat of the Facet he's trying to act with. On a 10+, he succeeds at what he set out to do. On a 7-9, he flinches, stalls, or hesitates. The Facet whose Stat he used will offer one of the following options to him and describe what it means in the situation: - His success has collateral damage. - There's a sacrifice he has to make to succeed. - Succeeding puts him in a worse spot than he'd planned for.

INTELLECT
The World		The Mind
Thought over action, words words words, aesthetics & art, nerdy shit, complicated things, things that get your mental gears turning, idealistic collectives.		Carefully reviewed facts, meticulously balanced logic. Your intelligence is all that's needed to solve this murder mystery - that, and for the others to shut their traps.
Biases
You're vastly more intelligent than these other bozos, but...
(Facet)	..._____refuses to respect your genius. How do they trick The Detective into disbelieving you?
(Facet)	...there's some sort of method to _____'s madness. What's a time their nonsense pointed you in the right direction?
Intellect GM Moves
- Reveal a dangerous miscalculation.	- Unearth unpleasant truths.	- Put a price on any answers.
- Test their morals, ideologies, and assumptions.	- Bring history back to haunt them.	- Introduce a contradiction or paradox.
When to make an Intellect GM move
- When The Detective misses a roll (6-) using your Stat
- When there's a lull in the game and you have the lowest Stat.
Stat Changes
- When you Suggest a Course of Action to The Detective and he acts on your suggestion, gain 1 to your Stat.	- When you Sabotage a Feature of another Facet's Domain, subtract 1 from their Stat.	- When The Detective chooses your version of events in Make a Deduction, gain 1 to your Stat and subtract 1 from another Facet's Stat.
Example Features
socio-economic theory	board games, "interactive fiction"	fun facts!
books	experiments	psychology
murals & art pieces, poetry	knowledgeable character (scholars, librarians, nerds)	symbols
theatre, acting, & lies		world history

STATS AND FACET MOVES

Declare Evidence
When The Detective asks how a Feature is tied to the murder, you can choose an already established Feature to become a Prior, or create a new Feature in your Domain to become a Prior.
Prior: Why is this fact relevant now? What question does it raise about the crime?
Suggest a Course of Action
When The Detective seems stuck on what to do and turns to the Facets for advice, any and all Facets can suggest a course of action to him. Each Facet with an idea tells him what they want him to do and why it's the best action to take. If the Detective picks your course of action, add 1 to your Stat.
Sabotage a Feature	Holds
If The Detective misses a roll using your Stat, you may choose to hold one. When another Facet's Feature is vulnerable to your Domain, you can spend one hold per scene to sabotage that Feature. Describe how it's vulnerable to you, and inflict a Condition on it. As well, subtract 1 from that Feature's Stat.

PSYCHE
The World	The Mind
Mood in the air, living and thriving things, things that provoke or remember strong emotion, strange shit, inexplicably & intangibly real things, nonsensical things, control over feelings.	Empathy, manipulation, premonitions too. The other Facets may mock your sensitive heart, but the term 'crime of passion' exists for a reason, and oh, oh will they never forget that!
Biases
Not even you can spare sympathy for these jerks, but...
(Facet)	..._____ seems to care in their own freakish way about The Detective. What's a time you both protected them?
(Facet)	...there's some sort of method to _____'s madness. What's a time their nonsense pointed you in the right direction?

Psyche GM Moves
- Hold them to past promises.	- Offer conditional support.	- Tug hard on their heartstrings.
- Manipulate them to unseen ends.	- Give them strange hunches and stranger visions.	- Turn the situation downright bizarre.
When to make an Psyche GM move
- When The Detective misses a roll (6-) using your Stat - When there's a lull in the game and you have the lowest Stat.
Stat Changes
- When you Suggest a Course of Action to The Detective and he acts on your suggestion, gain 1 to your Stat.	- When you Sabotage a Feature of another Facet's Domain, subtract 1 from their Stat.	- When The Detective chooses your version of events in Make a Deduction, gain 1 to your Stat and subtract 1 from another Facet's Stat.
Example Features
cryptids	religion	emotional or lively characters (lovers, haters, children)
animals	supranatural phenomena	nature (flowers, trees)
relationship dynamics	Sentimental keepsakes	dreams
emotional and social atmosphere	control over yourself and the world

Declare Evidence
When The Detective asks how a Feature is tied to the murder, you can choose an already established Feature to become a POI, or create a new Feature in your Domain to become a POI. POI: What about them seems suspicious? How are they acting oddly right now?
STATS AND FACET MOVES

Describe how it's vulnerable to you, and inflict a Condition on it. As well, subtract 1 from that Feature's Stat.

FYSIQUE

The World	The Mind
Things that can harm, threatening things, things that loom over you, powerful shit, immovable yet breakable objects, indulgent things, health and the lack of it.	Power, violence, hypervigilance. You alone know what thrills and terrors drive someone to murder. What will the killer respect more: babbling, crying, wringing hands – or a real show of force?
Biases
These weaklings are pathetic and you could crush them at any time, but...
(Facet)	... _____ is even softer than the others. How do you exploit their vulnerability?
(Facet)	... at least _____ knows how to have fun. What's a time you both made The Detective truly happy?

Fysique GM Moves

- Back them into a corner, literally or figuratively.
- Remind them of their limits.
- Cause damage or harm.
- Tempt their worst instincts.
- Escalate the situation.
- Rapidly shift the environment around them.

When to make an Fysique GM move

- When The Detective misses a roll (6-) using your Stat
- When there's a lull in the game and you have the lowest Stat.

Stat Changes

- When you Suggest a Course of Action to The Detective and he acts on your suggestion, gain 1 to your Stat.
- When you Sabotage a Feature of another Facet's Domain, subtract 1 from their Stat.
- When The Detective chooses your version of events in Make a Deduction, gain 1 to your Stat and subtract 1 from another Facet's Stat.

Example Features

- food
- drugs & other poisons
- buildings
- brawny characters (thugs, weightlifters, mercenaries)
- weapons
- the city herself
- a good strong state
- war and strategy
- weather
- natural disasters
- imbalanced power dynamics

Declare Evidence

When The Detective asks how a Feature is tied to the murder, you can choose an already established Feature to become a Landmark, or create a new Feature in your Domain to become a Landmark.

Landmark: What unique role does it play in the neighborhood? What is something currently locked, hidden, or inaccessible in it?

Suggest a Course of Action

When The Detective seems stuck on what to do and turns to the Facets for advice, any and all Facets can suggest a course of action to him. Each Facet with an idea tells him what they want him to do and why it's the best action to take. If the Detective picks your course of action, add 1 to your Stat.

Describe how it's vulnerable to you, and inflict a Condition on it. As well, subtract 1 from that Feature's Stat.

MOTORICS

The World

Things that move and think fast, things with lots of fiddly bits, what you shuffle in, stylish shit, smooth-cool-suave-slick, unrestrained & unstoppable forces.

The Mind

Quick on the uptake and on the draw - you'll catch the murderer while the other Facets are catching their breath. Leave them in the dust behind you, Detective! it's time for a hands-on approach.

Biases

You're too hip for these squares, but...

(Facet)

... is so uncool it's almost compelling. How do you try to fix them?

(Facet)

... slows everyone down with their fumbling. What's a time you had to pick up their slack for The Detective's sake?

Motorics GM Moves

- Take away their things.

- Call collect on their debts.

- Draw attention to something better left ignored.

- Assault their senses.

- Shake up the status quo.

- Throw a curveball.

When to make an Motorics GM move

- When The Detective misses a roll (6-) using your Stat
- When there's a lull in the game and you have the lowest Stat.

Stat Changes

- When you Suggest a Course of Action to The Detective and he acts on your suggestion, gain 1 to your Stat.

- When you Sabotage a Feature of another Facet's Domain, subtract 1 from their Stat.

- When The Detective chooses your version of events in Make a Deduction, gain 1 to your Stat and subtract 1 from another Facet's Stat.

Example Features

the invisible hand of the market

cars, machinery

mechanical operations

sports

clothes and fashion

tools (wrenches, pry bars)

dexterous characters (mechanics, dancers, drivers/speedfreaks)

sight, smell, sound, kinesthesia

disco

rumours

societal obligations

Declare Evidence

When The Detective asks how a Feature is tied to the murder, you can choose an already established Feature to become a Clue, or create a new Feature in your Domain to become a Clue.

Clue: In what peculiar spot did you find it? What about the Clue itself piques your suspicion?

Suggest a Course of Action

When The Detective seems stuck on what to do and turns to the Facets for advice, any and all Facets can suggest a course of action to him. Each Facet with an idea tells him what they want him to do and why it's the best action to take. If the Detective picks your course of action, add 1 to your Stat.

Sabotage a Feature

Holds

If The Detective misses a roll using your Stat, you may choose to hold one. When another Facet's Feature is vulnerable to your Domain, you can spend one hold per scene to sabotage that Feature. Describe how it's vulnerable to you, and inflict a Condition on it. As well, subtract 1 from that Feature's Stat.
